Major wet markets in Klang to close for disinfection

By EDWARD RAJENDRA edward@thestar.com.my

PASAR Besar Meru and three other wet markets will be closed on selected days until Dec 30 to facilitate cleaning and disinfection.

Klang Municipal Council (MPK) president Ahmad Fadzli Ahmad Tajuddin said the work would be coordinated by its wet market unit.

"Our wet markets must be washed and disinfected regularly as it has a large number of customers and traders daily.

"Pasar Besar Meru, which has a wholesale market and daily market, and other such facilities under MPK's purview, namely the Kapar, Port Klang and Pandamaran wet markets, will also be disinfected," he said at the council's full board meeting.

Ahmad Fadzli said the measures were part of efforts to make public markets safe amid the Covid-19 pandemic.

He added that daily cleaning and sanitisation would be carried out according to Health Ministry requirements.

Ahmad Fadzli advised traders and their workers to always wear their face masks properly, adding that enforcement officers would continue to ensure that physical distancing was adhered to at all wet markets.

If markets were to close for an extended period, he said it would have a significant economic impact.

Pasar Besar Meru and PKNS shoplots will be closed on Dec 11, 13 and 27 while the Port Klang wet market will be closed on Dec 11, 14 and 28.

Pandamaran wet market will be closed on Dec 11, 15 and 29.

By DALJIT DHESI daliit@thestar.com.my PETALING JAYA: As governments worldwide step up efforts to combat climate change, the building energy efficiency market in Malaysia is gaining momentum. Neapoli founder and CEO Stellios Plainiotis said the market is projected to grow steadily by 6% per year until 2030 both in Malaysia and globally, with the highest growth expected in India, China and in Asean.

both in Malaysia and globally, with the highest growth expected in India, China and in Asean.

He told StarBiz,: "This is because buildings are responsible for over 40% of global energy use and governments are intensifying efforts to combat climate change." A great emerging trend in the industry is digitalisation which is transforming the energy landscape and enables progress toward continuous energy efficiency improvements."

Towards this end, he said emerging digital technologies are introduced into buildings to enable greater energy efficiency gains. These include building information modelling, active energy management systems, data-driven consumer engagement platforms, and new performance-based revenue models.

Plainiotis was one of the masterminds behind the green design and infrastructure of Kuala Lumput International Airport 2, after which he started on his own and established Neapoli headquartered in Kuala Lumpur. It has offices in Seoul, Brisbane, London and Beijing, Neapoli is an environmental design and engineering consultancy Among some of the projects which the company undertook is the triple platinum-rated PKNS headquarters, the 11st Storey Menara PNB, the Penang International Airport Expansion, TRS Exchange, HSBC headquarters, the Penang International Airport Expansion, TRS Exchange, HSBC headquarters, the Openang Movartis HQ, Mastercard HQ and the Suria Mall KLCC.

To have a stronger foothold in the green, environmental and energy market, the company recently launched the Carbon Index (CI).

The CI is an accreditation system that benchmarks energy use and carbon emissions of buildings.

It is designed to be an accessible and affordable tool that could be applied to any building type, at any stage of the building's lifecycle from design, construction, remodelling to operation. It does not replace green building certification that focuses on design Plainiotis said the Ci aims to be 10 times more affordable, fully performance-based and hasale-free.

As it monitors operation, he said the Ci puts the occupant at the centre of the equation and incentives true energy savings.

But the most unique and revolutionary element is that it enables carbon trading, he added.

On the carbon certification based projects which Neapoli is looking at, he said at the moment it is involved in the Suria Mall KLCC project.

Cheng Hoe: Don't underestimate rivals powered by Honda

PETALING JAYA: Do not take the Angkor Warriors lightly.

That's the stern warning from Malaysia football coach Tan Cheng Hoe ahead of their AFF Suzuki Cup Group B opening match against Cambodia at the Bishan Stadium in Singapore today.

The last time both sides met was in 2018 and Malaysia won 1-0 in the competition's group match.

But Cheng Hoe said the team have changed in the last two years under the tutelage of former lapanese player Keisuke Honda.

under the tutelage of former Japanese player Keisuke Honda. He said they have adopted a different style and their current counter-attacking abilities can be devastating. "Although they didn't do too well in the World Cup qualifiers, what they showed on the pitch is still good. They have fast players and I'm sure they know how we play too as some of their players have competed in our league," he said.
"Our backline must always be alert to thwart their fast counter-attacks and I've told the boys to dominate possession and create plenty.

The players who have featured in the Malaysian League are forwards Chan Vathanaka (last played for PKNS in 2019), Prok Mony Udom (Negri Sembilan, 2018) and Keo Sokpheng (PKNP, 2018). Of the three, skilful Vathanaka is

But Cheng Hoe feels it will be foolish to focus on just one player.

"We can't pinpoint him alone as the others are capable of causing problems.

The three are some of the high-

Meanwhile, Cheng Hoe is praying his strike force will come good especially Guilherme De Paula, who has yet to hit top gear with the national team, and Shahrel Fikri Md Fauzi, who is returning from a knee injury.
